Provo, UT – August 13, 2010

Rocky Mountain University of Health Professions (RMUoHP) student and faculty receive award.

RMUoHP's PhD in Athletic Training student, Gregory Myer, was named the winner of the Journal of Athletic Training "Clint Thompson Award for Clinical Advancement" for his case report, "Longitudinal Assessment of Noncontact Anterior Cruciate Ligament Injury Risk Factors During Maturation in a Female Athlete." Dr. Myer received the prestigious award at the National Athletic Trainer's Association's Annual Meeting on June 23, 2010 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

RMUoHP's PhD in Athletic Training faculty member, Leamor Kahanov, EdD, ATC, was named first runner-up with her submission of "Bilateral Pulmonary Emboli in a Collegiate Gymnast: A Case Report."

About Rocky Mountain University of Health Professions:

Utilizing both a traditional and non-traditional model RMUoHP offers doctoral degrees for current and future healthcare providers and educators, including athletic trainers, nurses, occupational therapists, physical therapists, exercise physiologists, and chiropractors. RMUoHP utilizes a non-traditional model for the Doctor of Science (DSc) degree in Clinical Electrophysiology, Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) degree in Health Promotion & Wellness, Pediatric Science, Orthopaedic & Sports Science, Nursing, and Athletic Training, a Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) degree, and transitional Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) and Occupational Therapy (OTD) degree programs. The non-traditional model enables students to complete advanced degrees without relocating. Curricula emphasize specialized education in advanced clinical, research, and academic areas. The entry-level Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) degree program is offered through the traditional model.
